

Could you help your community in a time of need?

When things don't go to plan – such as during severe weather, power cuts, or supply disruptions – communities are strongest when people support one another.

That's why we're building a team of local volunteers to join our existing Community Resilience Team and support our new Community Emergency Hubs.

The hub is a place where people can come during a disruption to:

- Get reliable local information
- Stay warm, safe, and connected
- Receive practical help and reassurance
- Support one another until normal services resume

Who Can Volunteer?

- We're looking for people with everyday skills and local knowledge, such as:
- Being a friendly face who can listen and reassure
- Helping organise people or resources
- First aid, care, or welfare experience
- Knowledge of the local area and its residents
- Practical skills, admin, or communications
- Helping make refreshments or welcome visitors

What Volunteering Involves

- Volunteers may help with:
- Setting up and running the hub
- Sharing information clearly and calmly
- Supporting vulnerable or isolated residents
- Working alongside other local volunteers
